Rehabilitation of prisoners has become a matter of great importance. There is no benefit in combating criminal behavior by merely placing the prisoner in correctional institutions without rehabilitating him before leaving them. The prisoner needs to be taken by the hand to return to society. Experience has proven that therapeutic, rehabilitation and educational programs in prisons are more useful and effective in combating criminal behavior than simply placing the prisoner in penal institutions without rehabilitating him before leaving the correctional institution.

Education is an important element necessary in the field of rehabilitating prisoners. Education helps the prisoner get rid of ignorance and illiteracy, raises his intellectual level and thus matures his mental abilities and provides him with confidence in himself and in his ability to act properly and solve all the problems he faces in appropriate ways.
